WPG beefs up management team in lead up to development and production

WPG Resources Limited (ASX:WPG) advises that it has added to its management team, in anticipation of the approval of the Mining and Rehabilitation Program (MARF) for its flagship Peculiar Knob DSO iron ore mine south of Coober Pedy in South Australia. These appointments will help facilitate the Company's transition to developer and producer status.

Key appointments include:

- George Gaal, Group Financial Controller. George has had over 20 years experience in a range of industries including mining and construction;
- Anne Keaney, General Counsel. Anne is a very experienced corporate lawyer whose first degree was in geology;
- Ian White, formerly working on special projects, has been appointed General Manager, Risk, Audit and Systems; and
- Kurt Cramer, Senior Mining Engineer. Kurt is a highly experienced iron ore geologist and mining engineer and will be responsible for mine planning.

Heath Roberts, formerly General Counsel, has moved to a corporate management function to focus on External and Human Relations. Heath retains his role as an Executive Director of WPG.

In addition, Wayne Rossiter has been appointed Chief Executive of WPG's clean coal joint venture with Evergreen Energy Inc (NYSE Arca:EEE). Wayne is a mining engineer with additional finance qualifications and experience.

Several other senior appointments, including those in environmental management, government and community relations, geology and surveying, will be made soon. These positions will be based in Adelaide or on site, where more of WPG's human resources will be located as Peculiar Knob moves forward towards production.
